

Health

Niugini Nickel encourages and supports high standards of personal health and believe a healthy workforce leads to a more productive workforce. At the Wowo Gap project site, healthy lifestyles are encouraged and workers are treated onsite for local health issues such as intestinal worms and malaria.

There are no health clinics in the area with the nearest permanent health centre being located at Popendetta. Neither the national nor provincial government provides active health services to this remote area.

As part of our corporate social responsibility policy, Niugini Nickel provides a range of health services to local communities.

This ranges from health surveys to the provision of direct and indirect health services.

A healthy lifestyle is supported by providing a balanced diet to workers on site with fresh fruit and vegetables sourced weekly from surrounding villages as part of our buy local procurement policy.

Based on the lack of Government health services, Niugini Nickel operates health clinics in the main villages associated with the Wowo Gap tenement.

The national government provides medicines which Niugini Nickel distributes with health professionals and our community relations officers.

Without the support of the company, the local villages would not receive any form of health support.
